Angie Seth
Freelance Journalist
Anchor/Reporter/Host - CBC
President - Radio Television Digital News Association

My name is Angie Seth. I am an award-winning journalist, news anchor, reporter, host, and storyteller. I have been a journalist for close to 30 years. I'm currently a freelance journalist at the CBC working in both Television and Radio as an anchor/reporter/host. In June 2025, completed my first documentary, Two Suitcases: Anatomy of the Air India Bombing, with CBC as a producer on the project.

In addition, I'm a Professor at Seneca College, in their journalism department. In November 2024 I was elected as President of the RTDNA (Radio Television Digital News Association). Prior to that I was a news anchor and reporter for CTV News Channel covering the biggest stories of the day including 2 Federal elections, U-S elections, COVID-19 pandemic, the death of George Floyd, to the Queen's funeral and the Coronation of King Charles III. In March 2023, I was offered my own show at CTV - This Hour With Angie Seth. This was an all-Canadian content one hour show comprised of interviews with CTV anchors across the country about issues important to Canadians in the respective provinces on both a regional and National level. I hosted and produced the show alongside my producer.

Before joining CTV, I was a reporter and multi-market weekend anchor at Global News. I anchored 14 shows a day (6pm and 11pm) across the country. I also hosted an hourly newscast at CBC prior to joining Global in 2013.

I started my career at OMNI television back in 1999 as a reporter/writer and news coordinator for South Asian News. In 2008 was I promoted to lead anchor of South Asian news, along with specials on the Pakistan earthquake and the 2006 Tsunami and the Air India tragedy of June 23rd, 1985.
